

The Swasey Peak Register

This peak is approximately 40 miles (64km) west of Delta, Utah and is the highest peak at 9586 feet (2922 meters) in the House range of mountains.

On this peak there is a mailbox that houses a small notebook in a glass jar – the register.

This document contains a picture of each of the pages of the register and represents the entries from the first, in October of 1992, to October 22, 2010 – the date that the pictures were taken.

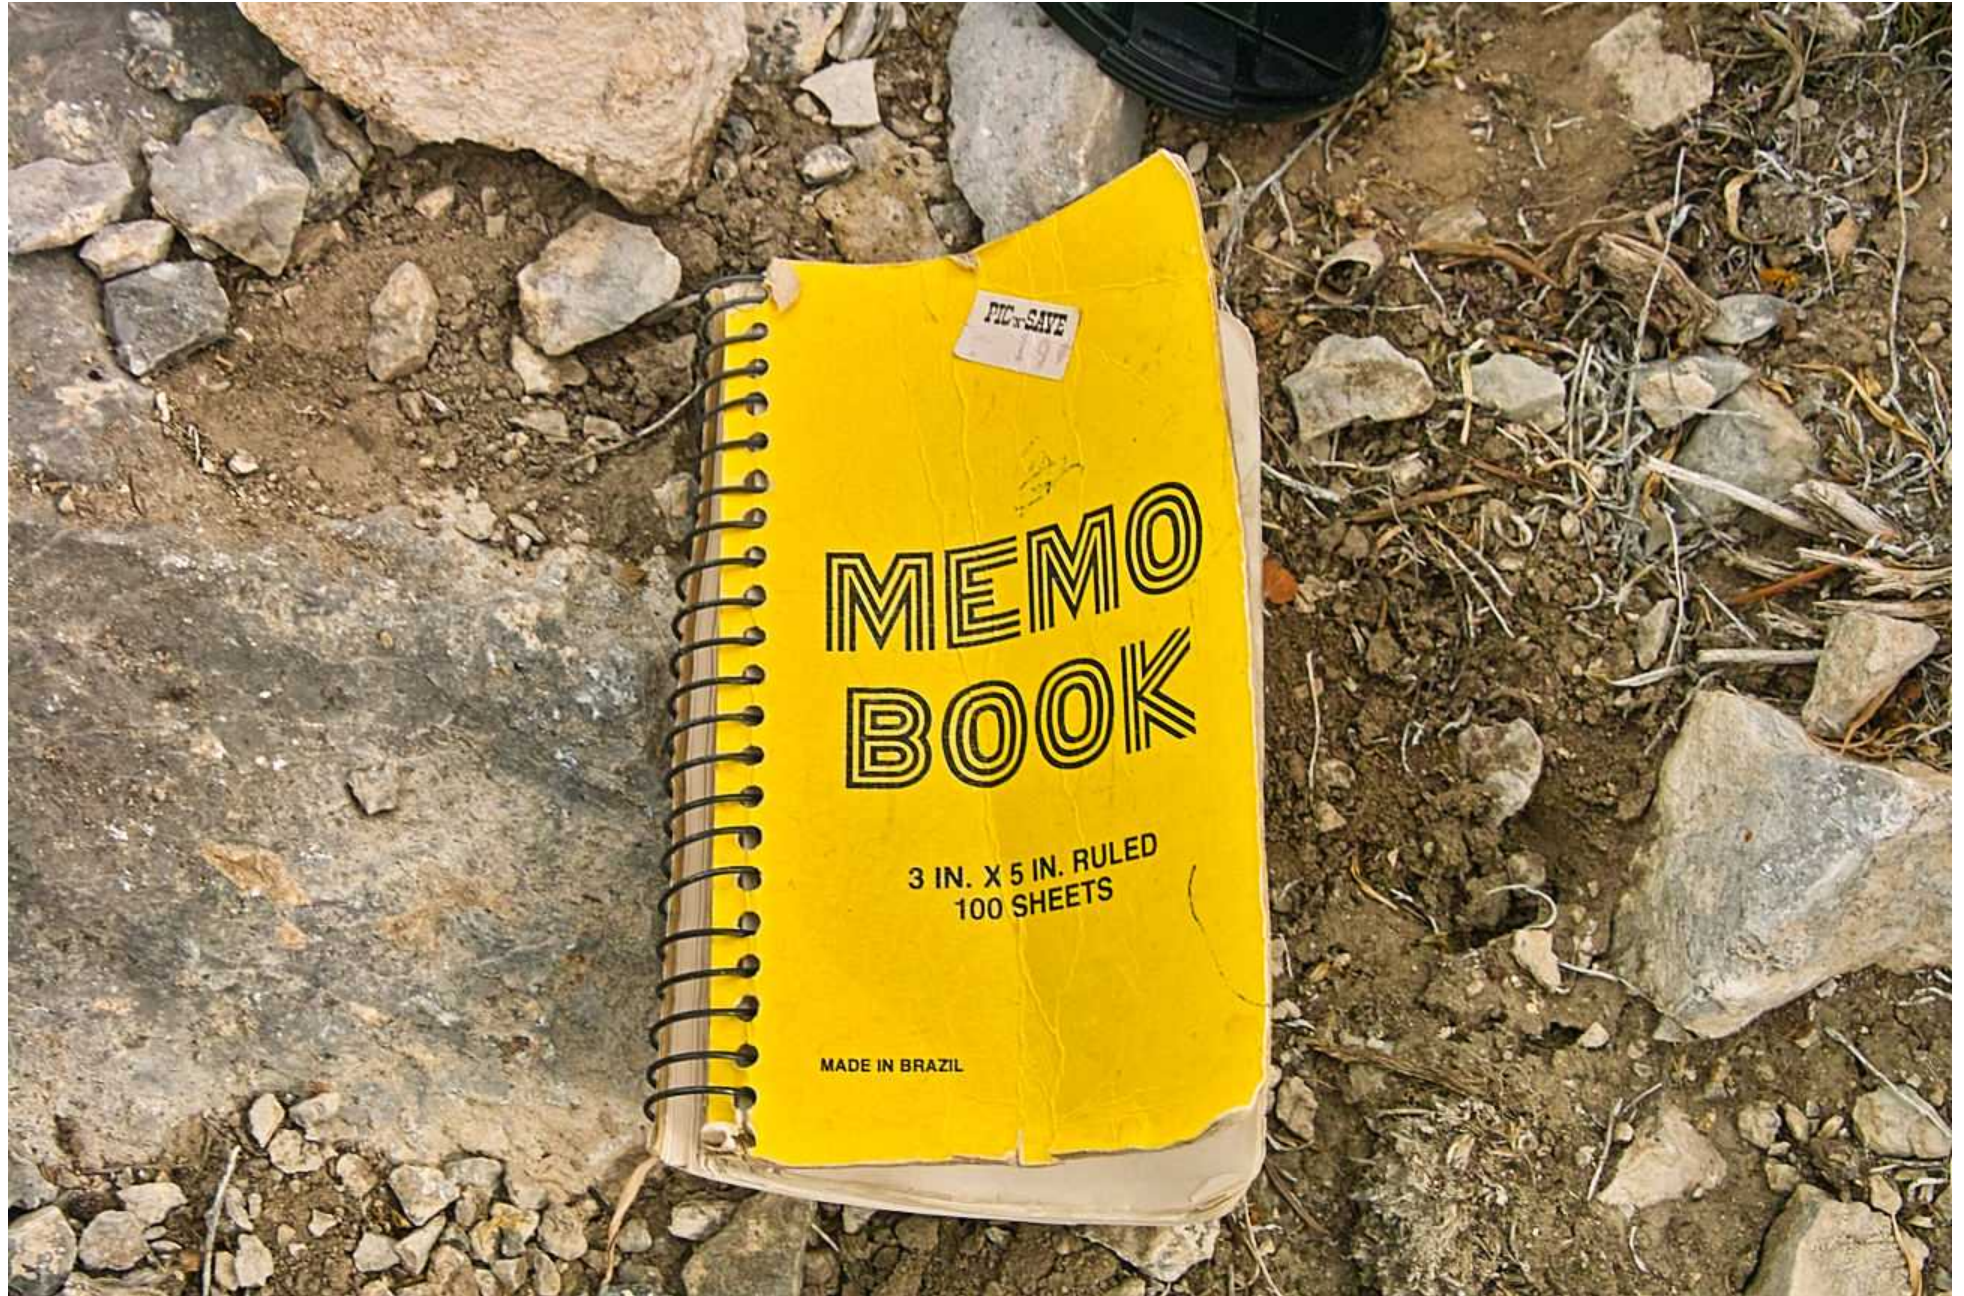

NO changes have been made to the pictures themselves aside from color/brightness adjustments although there is evidence of a couple of pages having been removed – but not by me!

Another nice day in the House Range, yesterday was Notch Peak. Today the suns been in & out w/ lots of hoar frost on the Bristle cones. I am here w/ the WA Croo (Craig & Caryl Sola), just a training trip for other adventures this summer. Enjoy all Question: Where is the mountain from where the view doesn't just go to the next mountains?

LITTLE FAMILY AND HOW MOVED THEY MIGHT FEEL TO BE HERE ON SWASEY'S PEAK, THIS IS CERTAINLY A PLACE WHERE WE MUST KEEP FOREVER WILD.

Following an enjoyable hike, I am always disturbed by the rather simplistic Abbeyan approach of many fellow hikers. Take solace in the grandeur & consume yourself in solitude, but please refrain from shallow ridgely pontifications. The subliminal almost melancholy grace of nature should be embraced. Accept our insignificance and try not to close on the fact that we too are a portion of that which we love. We are predators and prey -- not martyrs to a greater cause.

P.S. The above was written at 10:10 A.M. It's now 2:55 PM
I tried to get back down

To the Simbad Road by way of the Saddle to the east Then down the draw to the South. Only found an safe cliffs & dropoffs, so I am now crossing the top for the 2nd time today; Very hot Very tired.

P.P.S. The Eagle feather was found on the way up & the molten metal setting on it is from the plane crash.
